Washington, D. C. Washington, D. C., Dac. 9, 1899.

Is THERE SO ONE IN all this bullabo loo uses the pension business to say one word for the agents? The country bat grown slarmed at the magnitude of the persion appropriation, as well it may : but ben't it a ffule untain to blame the agents on that account? They deln't pass the bills and they are not responsible for their passage. Notther does their existence and their industry add a rent to the appropriation. Yet, to real the shullitions of the seteemed Asia Juck Herald, an unsuspecting person might be led to suppose that the pendonagents had done it all and that their suppression would prevent a deficit in the national finances. There is a vast amount of nonsense about all this talk. If we really want to pay the money out to those who are entitled to pensions, the agents are the surest and most expeditions means through which we can achleve that end. It is the most transparent nonsense to say that the pensioners will get their dues just as soon and just as certainly without the help of an agent. There are thousands of Instances which show that this is the wildest absurdity. We venture to way that every agent in Washington can produce a curitord of testimony from his clients to the contrary. We go further; we make the assertion that the United States Government has never been known to look up a creditor or to make a single overture toward paying even the most sucred of its debts. We meet that out of every hundred penstoners entitled to an increase or to any additional stipual, nivery would die of old age without hearing of it if they had to depend on the Government's notifying them. And, finally, we make bold to my that, whatever may be the motive, the effect of drafteying the pension agents' business ; Bolls Id.

Clarkson Thinks He Would Make an Exectiont Presidential Candidate, Private Lessons IS Laurunges, tician and late First Assistant Postmaster. General, thinks that Gen. Miles would be a mighty good Republican candidate for the Presidency, and so the Miles boom has spread from the Army to the outside politicians. For, be it known, there has been a Miles boom in the Army for the past three years. Its existance has been often dended, but it is on tap all the same. Gen. Miles is a Presidential candidate and is a very active one at that. In addition to the Army influence he has the Sherman support. Senator Sherman is for him for family reasons. Gen. Sherman is for him, too. It is no mere surmise, either, that the provales Indian scare in the Northwest is by no means unconnected with the Miles Presidental boom. Army officers who are not in the Miles hurran will tell you these things if you ask them.
